On July 22, 1604, King James of England announced that a new Bible translation would be produced by a committee of scholars and theologians made up of both Anglicans and Puritans. He hoped the partnership between the two rival groups would help heal England's religious division. Seven years later, the King James Version was completed with the help of 47 scholars and theologians. To commemorate the 400th anniversary of the KJV we will have a special DVD presentation Sunday Evenings, September 18th & 25th entitled “The King James Bible”.
